

Instacart paying 80 cents an hour because worker received a large tip

Topics: tip ♦ wage ♦ people ♦ pay ♦ state ♦ service ♦ minimum ♦ job ♦ laws ♦ contractor 1320 points by timebomb0 9 days ago expand

total comments

715

9 days8 days7 days

Top Posters (click to search)

16	lenticular	8	tedivm	8	tareqak	8	throwaway415415
8	dang	7	FireBeyond	6	foobiekr	6	the_clarence
6	Dylan16807	6	sametmax	5	warp_factor	5	diminoten

Search

▲atom-morgan 9 days ago
Seriously, this is the responsibility consumers have in a free market. If there's behavior you don't like, move on. You don't get to complain about bad actors when you're literally keeping them in business.
expand reply

▲lenticular 9 days ago
Collective action is essentially impossible among consumers though. Boycotts essentially never work. Not only that, but who are you going to use instead of instacart: Amazon Fresh? Uber? Or will you drive yourself to the store and buy it from minimum wage employees who work unstable hours? Also, what do you think the working conditions were like for whoever picked that asparagus?
expand reply

▲rubbingalcohol 9 days ago
At least there are federal protections for employees. Companies that offset their operating costs onto an on-demand contract labor force are in a really exploitative gray area.

I disagree that collective action is impossible. Consumers become aware of problems, eg. high fructose corn syrup, and act accordingly, eg. buying less sugary junk. Cultural change is slow-moving but it starts with people giving a shit.

expand reply

▲oarsinsync 9 days ago
Your comment suggests that it's ok to directly support bad businesses because you're probably also indirectly supporting bad businesses.

If that's not what you meant, can you please clarify?

expand reply

▲nradov 9 days ago
Most employees of large grocery stores are paid significantly more than minimum wage.
reply

▲aqme28 9 days ago
>Boycotts essentially never work

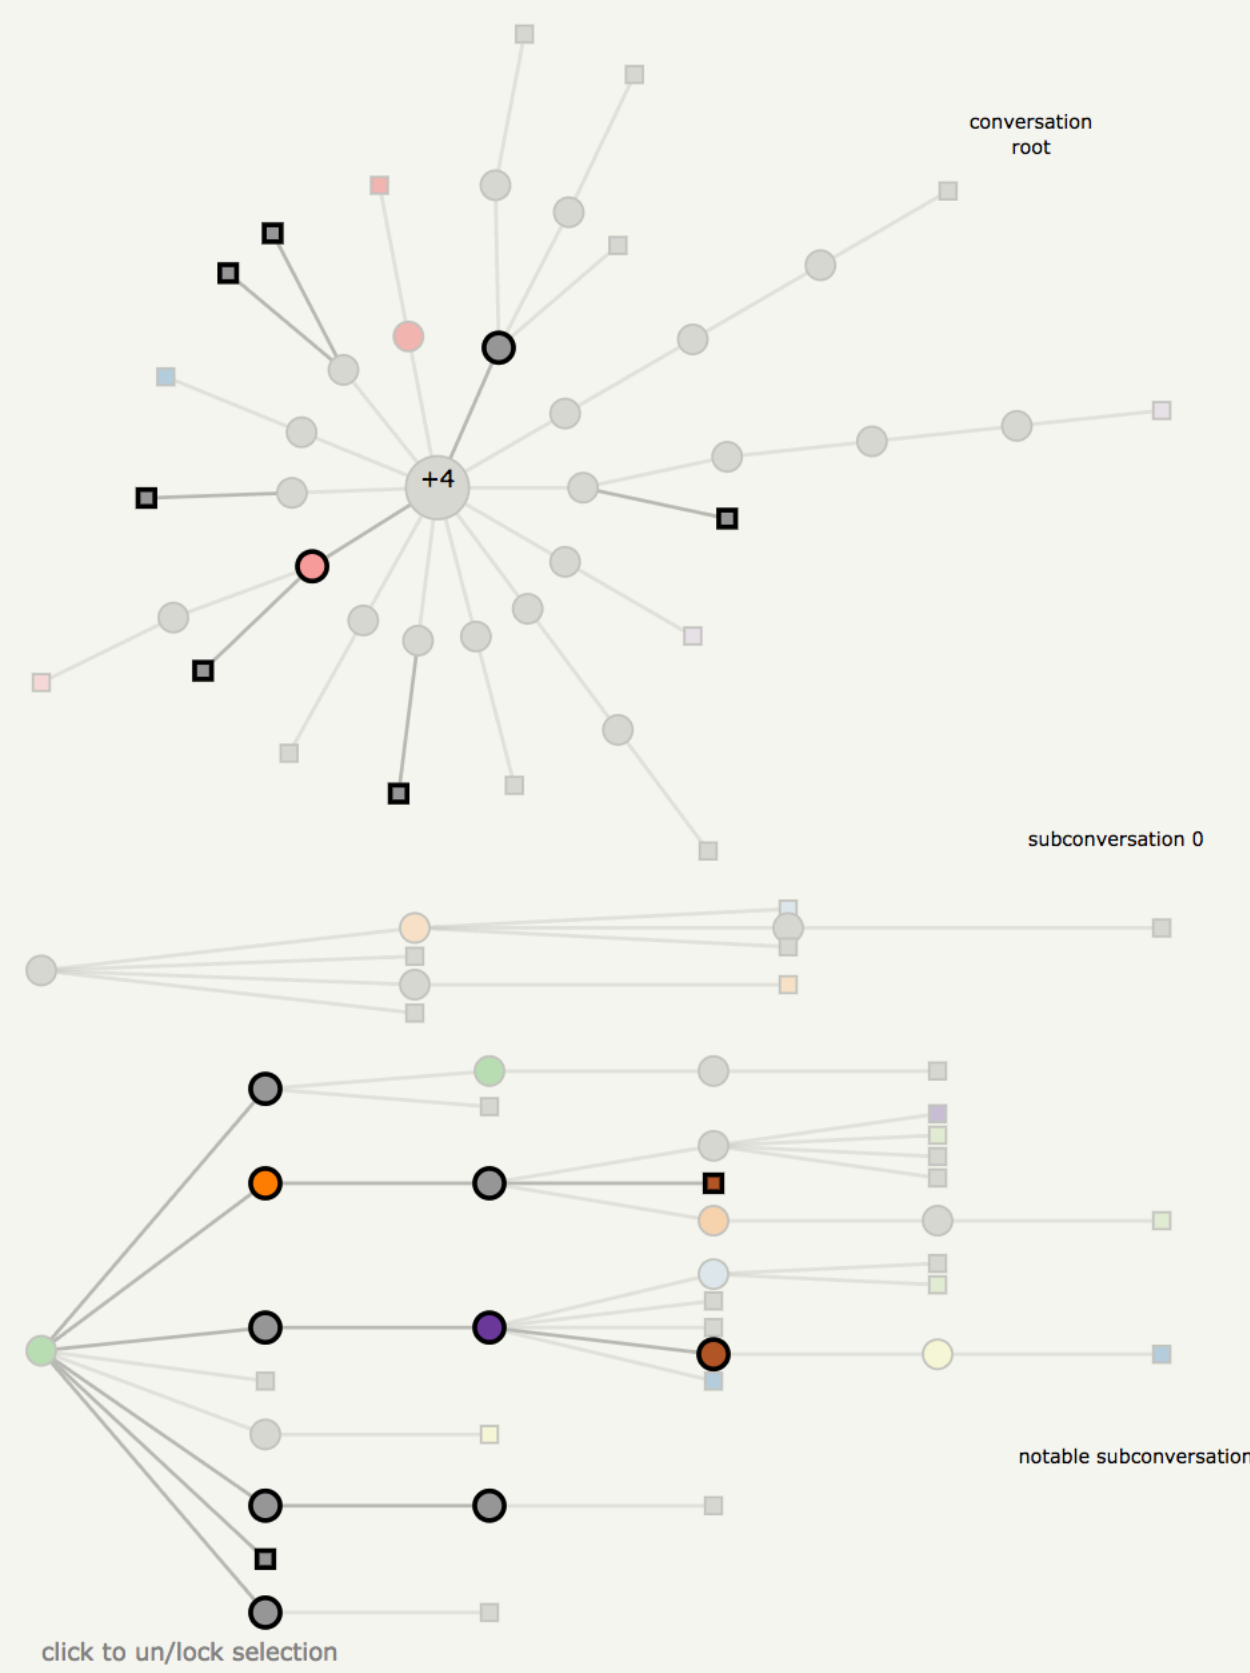

Is this true?

expand reply

▲manicdee 9 days ago

She Could Get Millions to Turn This Factory into Condos. She's Not Selling

Topics: people ♦ property ♦ house ♦ tax ♦ sell ♦ building ♦ land ♦ irrational ♦ rich ♦ machines
76 points by danso 6 hours ago expand

comments

21

4 hours106 minutes

Top Posters (click to search)

3	stronglikedan	3	fixvzbjzjs	3	JAlexoid	2	Imm
2	paulsutter	2	plink	2	drugme	2	puzzle
2	djmobley	2	mixmastamyk	2	lm28469

Search

▲crispyambulance 3 hours ago
But she is going to rent it out, eventually.

> The shop closed two years ago. Since her father died, > the factory space is Ms. Galuppo's to use as she wishes, > but she is not rushing to rent it out. Before seeking a > new commercial tenant, she wants to find the right way > to dispose of all the old equipment, file cabinets and > other workplace detritus.

This person just wants to move on her own timeline. That's perfectly fine. The family must be pretty flush to be able to do that however.

What would be bad is allowing the space to disintegrate like what happens in many other cities.

expand reply

▲paulsutter 3 hours ago
And she'll get even more millions if she waits. She can also develop apartments, collect rent, and maintain ownership. And she can wait as long as she wants to do either.

EDIT: of course she needs to pay property taxes but that's her choice isn't it

expand reply

▲jcampbell1 3 hours ago
She can get millions without selling. She could walk into any bank and get a $10M line of credit the same day from this property. This could be arranged in 24 hours or less.
reply

▲dspillett 3 hours ago
So she should be forced to abandon a working factory for someone else so use the space? Is your house bigger than you absolutely need? Do you have a garden? Would you like to be forced to give it up so multiple smaller living units could be built?

It is hers, she can choose to maintain it for its current use if she wishes, unless it is causing harm. There is a grey area here with derelict sites, as that is a waste of space and often they can be dangerous, but that does not appear to be the case here.

expand reply

▲puzzle 3 hours ago
From the article, given the area it's in, it doesn't sound like it would